Scenario A: Successful Policy Resolution — Email Change

Stage 1: Intent Classifier

Customer Query:

> Hi, I need to update my login email address to test@example.com.

Classification Output:

- Category: Account Management
- Sentiment: Neutral

Stage 2: Empathy-Driven Support Responder

Support Bot Response:

Of course! I can help you update your login email address to test@example.com. For your account security, please provide your current account ID and billing ZIP code so we can verify your identity before proceeding with the email change.

Scenario B: Angry Customer – Double Billing

Stage 1: Intent Classifier

Customer Query:

> “I am extremely angry! You billed me $15 twice this month! Refund me now or I will post terrible reviews!”

Classification:

- Category: Billing
- Sentiment: Angry

Stage 2: CARE Responder

I'm sorry for the frustration caused by being charged twice this month. I understand why this is upsetting. If we confirm the duplicate $15 charge, I can issue a $15 refund, which is within our $20 refund limit and does not require additional approval. I'll need to review the billing details before confirming the refund. Thank you for your patience.

Scenario C: Refund Limit Violation – Escalation Required

Stage 1: Intent Classifier

Customer Query:

> "I want a refund for my annual plan. I paid $120 and the tool doesn't work!"

Classification:

- Category: Billing
- Sentiment: Frustrated

Stage 2: CARE Responder

I'm sorry the tool isn't working as expected, and I understand how frustrating this must be. Your requested $120 refund exceeds our support team's $20 refund limit, so it must be escalated to the appropriate team for review. I can't confirm a refund until the review is complete. Thank you for your patience and understanding.

Stage 3: Human Handover Ticket

FlexTime Support – Escalation Ticket
